

The most interesting experience of my life

Imagine being in class and someone tells you that you're able to go on a school trip to America in a few years. How would you feel? Well, I certainly felt more excited than ever. This happened to me in first grade of high school. I'm now in fourth grade and I'm going to tell you all the highlights of my trip to Millis, which was the village I stayed for (unfortunately) only one week.

You know what, I'm just going to start off with the best part of the trip. Actually, this was already the day after we had arrived. It was on a Saturday and it was like 30 degrees, the sun was shining and we had a pool party. The party took place in the garden of an American host. It started at 2 pm and it was so much fun! There was lots of food, which is pretty usual in America, and it was the perfect opportunity for us all to get to know each other. We also made a lot of pictures, so we could remember this day when we got back to The Netherlands.

After the pool party, which lasted until around 4 pm, we all went back to our host family's houses. We could take a shower and get changed, because we had to go to a soccer game which started at 5 pm. This was a great experience, not only because of the game, but also because of the huge stadium and the large amount of people that were there. We got a huge bucket of popcorn and enjoyed being there so much, because their home team even finally won since a very long time!

Another highlight part of the trip was Wrentham Outlets, which is a big brand outlet centre about 25 to 30 minutes from Millis. We went here with the whole group on Wednesday, the day before we left. Almost everyone bought some new clothes, because of the great price deals. The weather was perfect and after we had been shopping, we got some food at the food court.

Unfortunately, the week went by very fast. The weather had been perfect and our group had built up a very strong bond. I am already looking forward to April, when the American students come to The Netherlands. It was an experience to never forget!